

THE JERKY JOURNAL

A GUIDE FOR THE PRODUCTION OF JERKY

The origins of jerky are shrouded in deep antiquity. Today, jerky is a popular snack because of the many kinds of meat that can be used for this versatile snack, and the many flavors and spices available that can be added to meat before drying.

The 225 page Jerky Journal provides information on:

- History of jerky
- Current shelf-stable meat snack
- Home production of jerky
- Home production of pemmican
- Small scale production of whole muscle
- Small scale production of restructured jerky
- Formulations
- Food safety guidelines
- FSIS regulations
- Heat-treated, shelf-stable HACCP plan
- Jerky and shelf-stable meat snack articles
- Resources relating to jerky production

The educational manual will help you comply with government regulation. It may also give you ideas on how to more efficiently produce a better jerky product for your customers.

It is priced at $35 for members ($50 for non-members), including shipping and handling (PA residents add 6% sales tax). The attached order form can be printed from and sent with a check payable to AAMP, P.O. Box 269, Elizabethtown, PA 17022. To use a credit card, provide card number, expiration date, name on card and signature, and fax to 717-367-9096.

Suppliers or other members wishing to advertise in the manual may contact Jay Wenthers for a rate sheet. Closing date for advertisers is August 20, 2004.
