

Meeting the Regulations to Control Listeria monocytogenes in Ready-To-Eat Meat Products

AN ACADEMIC APPROACH TO THE LISTERIA MONOCYTOGENES REGULATION

Although the Listeria monocytogenes regulation was published on October 2, 2003, many questions still surround the regulation. To help AAMP members, the 2004 pre-convention workshop was dedicated to Listeria monocytogenes issues. The workshop and manual was team developed by Michigan State University and Iowa State University. The manual that was used for the workshop is now for sale.

The workshop manual provides information on:

- Basic meat microbiology
- Alternatives 1, 2, and 3 for Listeria monocytogenes control
- Use of antimicrobials in ready-to-eat meat products
- Computer model for estimating antimicrobials in processed meat
- Manufacturing demonstrations
 - Coarse ground sausage
 - Ham
 - Roast beef
- Improving sanitation through facility design and maintenance

The educational manual will help you comply with government regulation. It may also give you ideas on how to use new anti-microbiological technology more effectively reduce a hazard that may occur.

It is priced at $35 for members ($50 for non-members), including shipping and handling (PA residents add 6% sales tax).
